

Title of Thesis	The Study of Working Part Time Job in IBS College students
Name	Thomas Lau Yeo Seng
Program	BBA (Hons) International Business (In collaborations with Twintech International University College of Technology, KL)
Date of Submission	May 2016
Student Thesis Code	2016/MAY/TIUCT/BBAFA/04

ABSTRACT

The study conducted was very useful as it determined self-management skills of the students. Apart from that, this study also observed the influence of part-time job to students. The four questions and their objectives are very serviceable which allowed the researcher can understand more clearly in how to develop the questionnaire and utilize the problems and the objectives which influence college students to find a part time job and also the problems which they might face during their part time jobs. Also, with the research objectives which develop by the researcher can understand the purpose of the college students which factors that influence them to find a part time job and also identify the effect which affect the college students on their part time jobs.

The aim of this chapter is to study how demographic variables, such as age, gender and income level of IBS College student doing part-time job. In this chapter consist of research design, process of data collection, research instrument, and types of analyses. The researcher was using quantitative questionnaire. The questionnaire has total 6 sections and it include demographic such as gender, age, race, religion, marriage status, income level, family background, and family members. Section B, C, D and E are all related to the 4 research questions. The questionnaires were distributed personally by the researcher to 50 College students in Miri who are doing their part-time job.

This research is to study the part time worker among IBS students in IBS College Miri. The research objectives are to find out the purpose which influence college students find part time jobs, to know the preference of the part time jobs, to know the price range which offered by part time jobs and to identify the effect of the part time jobs .The research methodology used is quantitative research. Questionnaires are distributed to randomly convenient IBS students in Miri and feedback by 50 respondents of the students.

As the data analysis that received from the 50 respondents, the researcher of this thesis realizes that working as a part time job during study life is acceptable because with the money which earned can be used to cover some amount of the college payment. All their need is just physical and mental be well prepared. Also, the researcher found out that working as a part timer can also learn a lot of things such as leadership, or increase communication skill and also leadership skill.