

Title of Thesis	Factors Affecting the Higher Education Students' Decision to Work Abroad
Name	Ting Kee Ing
Program	BA (Hons) Accounting and Finance (In collaborations with UCSI)
Date of Submission	April 2020
Student Thesis Code	2020/ARP/UCSI/BAAF/07

ABSTRACT

Researcher found that the decision of higher education students to work in overseas is increasing recently. There are many factors that may influence student's decision to work abroad. The main objective of this study is to examine the factors affecting higher education students' decision to work abroad. In this research study, the researcher mainly focus on the five factors which are salary and compensation, type of industrial development, career prospects, quality of life, and influence from family and friends. Quantitative Technique method is use to examine the relationship between independent variables and dependent variables. The five independent variables showed a significant relationship towards students' decision to work abroad. This research was conclude with the discussion of findings, implications of the study, limitations of the study and recommendation for future research.